Scott Barlow, Bureau of Building Repair, thanked the Department and expressed appreciation for the help finding materials that will be safer for staff.

Jessian said that it is difficult to find purchasers and that they are just recommendations for now.

Chair Sullivan asked if city vehicles are included in this report.

Jessian said that they are not but that they are listed on the SFApproved.org website.

Chair Sullivan asked if the dashboard was used to choose the award recipients.

Jessian said that the awards have previously been giving based on purchasing data from vendors.

Commissioner Wald asked if the dashboard is visible to people outside City departments.

Chris Geiger said that this is a pilot, and he is hoping that it could be disseminated for feedback.

Director Raphael said that the dashboard will be a powerful communication tool and she hopes to share any lessons learned next year. She asked how to best improve compliance and what the Department could improve.

Sailaja said that making resources more accessible and raising awareness of the regulations would be helpful.

Scott added that staff need to start thinking about environmental impact of purchasing decisions.

5. Update on Building Material Reuse 2021 Progress. Sponsor: Deborah Raphael, Director. Speakers: Eden Brukman, Senior Green Building Coordinator, and James Slattery, C&D Zero Waste Coordinator. (Discussion)

Director Raphael introduced the item.

Eden and James presented on building material reuse progress in 2021.

Commissioner Ahn asked about trends due to the pandemic and how downtown San Francisco will be impacted.

Eden said that they have heard concerns about the abundance of furniture and that the material exchange will help with this.

James added that this problem existed long before the pandemic.

Commissioner Wald asked how this work is connected to the groups thinking about new building construction.

Eden said that the All for Reuse Alliance includes contractors and designers.

James added that about half of comingled debris can be repurposed and the other half cannot. This issue originates at the building's conception.

Eden said that this connects to the building's embodied carbon.

Chair Sullivan expressed excitement over the online exchange and asked who the owner of the platform will be.

Eden said that this needs to be determined but hopes to figure out the economics through the proposal process.

Chair Sullivan said that Craigslist might be able to provide support or ideas. He asked what items could be reused and make a difference.

Eden said that surplus materials and finishing materials are low hanging fruit.

James added that breaking free from profits could open up a lot of possibilities.

Chair Sullivan said that he would like to hear an update on this project at the end of the grant.

There was no public comment.
